Planting Potatoes.

As potato planting time approaches County Agent Hoffman gives the following information to Adams county farmer:

Where the acreage planted in potatoes is not large enough to warrant the investment in a planter, the ease of plowing the seed under in every third furrow appeals to the average farmer as compared to previous preparation of the soil, marking out and covering. While the latter method is best, plowing the crop in may be fairly satisfactory where the soil is loose and mellow, as following a tilled crop, buckwheat stubble or a one year old clover sod. When plowed under a tough grass sod, however, the sprouts will often simply grow around under the sod and fail to get up at all. If the sod were thoroughly cut up with a disc harrow before plowing there would be less difficulty. Preliminary discing is also advisable under other soil conditions.

Plowing in potatoes also tends to put the seed too deep and provides no loose soil below in which to root. Conditions would be improved if the seed were pushed into or against the site of the turned furrow slice so as to be covered by the next round at about the right depth (three or four inches). The sprouts can then come up between the furrow slices rather than through them. Otherwise, the seed pieces should be dropped as close as possible to the plowed land side of the furrow. This helps to secure a good stand and straight roots.

PEARLS FAMOUS IN HISTORY

Romance Surrounding Them Transcends That of Any Other of the World's Prized Gems.

What an unbelievable romance there is in the lives of certain pearls, passionately admired, desired, awaited, stolen, sold as beautiful slaves, then returned again to their glory in the oriental luxury of a diadem or on the neck of an empress! Reflect upon those which were exchanged as presents of state in the jungles of some Chinese emperor, and which, suddenly exchanged, find new life in reflecting the sky! Others, in Greece, have adorned the statues of Venus. In the peoples of Asia, after the conquest of the East, have received important favors. The Persian women, M. B. said, that pearls during their slumbers were seen them in their dreams, and they suspended them by strings from their necks that the splendor of the pearls might remind them of their beauty which they could not see.

There was a pearl of a size which Jesus Christ referred to as a pearl of great price. This was in our library, and it is a pearl of the Emperor of Spain, the King of Catherine de Medici, and the King of Henry III. It was given to the Queen of France, and it was a pearl of a size which they could not see.

Irvin, one of the leading citizens of Buchanan Valley, and the last member of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Irvin, passed away on Wednesday evening after a three weeks' illness from Bright's disease at the age of 74 years, 10 months and 6 days. Mr. Irvin was born and lived his entire life on the Irvin homestead in Buchanan Valley. He was of large build and strength which attracted attention and was admired for his many manly qualities. He enjoyed dispensing a hospitality which was at once rare and charming. No one who ever visited the Irvin home but carried away a warm remembrance of the kindnesses surrounding the home. At the old Irvin homestead the first mass was said in this part of the country by Missionary Fathers in the early days. Mr. Irvin followed farming and was a lumberman and knew the hills of old Adams as few of the present generation did. His home was open every year to a number of deer hunters and he led the party to the chase. The funeral will be held to-day, Saturday, at 9 A. LAND OF GORGEOUS COSTUMES

Peasants of Northern Dalmatia Display Their Wealth in the Finery of Their Garb.

There is one spot of the modern world where the men dress as gorgeously as the women. Among the Morlachchi, or peasants of northern Dalmatia, the women are gay enough to look at, but their men folk are sayer.

Like peasant garb the world over, the costumes have remained the same from year to year, and will doubtless continue unchanged for years to come. The women wear short skirts, almost hidden under aprons embroidered in bright colors, with loose white waists and white linen kerchiefs serving as headgear for the older women, and little red caps for the girls. Large, quaint earrings are common, and so are necklaces and rings to match, and on her arm the Morlachchi woman is likely to carry a great bag of the same material as her apron for the transportation of miscellaneous packages and a permanent equipment of knitting. The men are more gorgeous, caring about their business in large, dark blue knee breeches encircled with a many-colored sash, and topped by coat and waistcoat often of bright red; and the buttons of these garments command especial attention, for they are large and shining and chains dangle from them. A Morlachchi, it is said, carries his wealth on the front of his waistcoat, which is often decorated with knobs and bars of solid silver. It may even happen that a man is rich enough to have these ornaments in solid gold, and then truly he is highly admired. On his head he wears a red cap, like the caps worn by the girls; and an interesting point to the student of Dalmatian costume is that the caps smaller and smaller as one moves southward.

QUAINT WEDDING COACHES.

An American bridegroom who recently made his journey to the altar in a steam plow has had many rivals in matrimonial wedding carriages observes London Answers.

It is not long since a bridal couple and their guests made a dramatic appearance in a Kentish village in a traction engine, and procession of trucks gayly decorated with flags, flowers and evergreens.

A wedding party drove up to St. Mark's church, Birmingham, one Easter Sunday, in mourning coaches, the horses being incongruously adorned with white rosettes. A prettily decorated tramcar was the chosen vehicle of a Wolverhampton bridal party, the driver and conductor wearing white gloves and smart buttonholes, and the journey to the church being heralded by the explosion of a number of fog signals.

But perhaps the most novel journey of all was that of a young Australian couple whose wedding procession slid down a steep hill from the bride's home to Payback church on seven toboggans decorated with pine branches and flowers.

OAK MARKS VENERATED SPOT

Tree Planted Where Abraham Erected Altar to the Lord Has Been Carefully Preserved.

It is recorded that when Abraham was promised the possession of the land of Canaan and was commanded to "walk through the land," he removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and built there an altar to the Lord. This spot is still marked by a great oak, venerated alike by Christian, Jew and Mohammedan. It is to this protection that one must attribute its preservation in a region cleared of almost all trees by the improvident Turk. The species is not uncommon in Palestine and Major Portal, while stationed at general headquarters of the British army there, sent to Kew gardens a small box of acorns which were recognized as the fruit of Abraham's tree. Sir Joseph Hooker visited the spot in 1860 and wanted to secure a specimen of the wood for Kew, but no one would cut off a bough. It was only when the snow, which visited Jerusalem in 1856 and which did not spare Hebron, had broken down one of the oak's branches he was able to secure a portion of it which is to be seen to this day in one of the Kew museums. But a more practical fame awaits the tree, for it is with it that the Syrian forests will probably be rehabilitated in the bright era which is dawning now that the Turk no longer rules the land.

Armenia's Homer.

Armenia, as well as Greece, had a Homer. Like Homer, Moses of Khorene, who wrote in the seventh century, was held to be dealing altogether with tradition until archaeological discoveries revealed the fact that some of his personages were historic, according to the Christian Science Monitor. Semiramis, the queen who built the city of Van, much as Homer describes Dido building the city of Carthage, has been found in the records of the past; but the civilization of her day was overthrown by Cyrus and his successors, and the land became Armenia, and entered upon a period of about a thousand years when general literacy obtained among the population. Concerning this period practically no record survives. Not until the fourth century did the land, now influenced by Christianity, begin to find self-expression; so it is hardly strange that Moses of Khorene wrote long before he wholly of his imagination.

AFFAIR OF GREAT DIGNITY

Daily Opening of Session of British House of Commons is a Ceremonious Matter.

The recent retirement of Hon. William Lowther, who was speaker of the British house of commons for 16 years, has given rise to considerable comment on that job, which is one of great dignity. The opening of the daily session of commons is itself an affair of much solemnity.

First comes the speaker's attendant, wearing evening dress, with a gold badge suspended from a chain. As he approaches the inner lobby from the corridor the sergeant shouts, "Hats off, strangers!" and the procession immediately enters the lobby. Following the speaker's attendant comes the sergeant-at-arms bearing the massive gold mace. Somebody recalls that it was Oliver Cromwell who cried, "Take away that bauble," and for the time wrecked a custom that was speedily revived.

The speaker follows the mace. He is attired in a black silk gown, full-bottomed wig and silk knee breeches, the tail of the gown being lifted from the ground by the speaker's attendant, also gowned in silk. The chamberlain and the speaker's secretary bring up the rear of the parade.

It is said that the stranger who was inclined to smile at this display had only to glance at the face of the speaker to check his levity. The latter's composure and the fine dignity of his men, robed the ceremony of all staginess.
